Language Arts: Your kids are amazing!! They have been reading machines this past week. I hope you are seeing how great they are doing on their practice passages. We finished up a pretty long packet of passages, reviewed how they did in each genre, and discussed the importance of paying attention to types of questions they might be making errors on. They are more than ready to take on the EOG next week, and more importantly....6th grade! I'm really proud of them.

Social Studies: We spent this week finishing up their google presentations on their research project topic. They turned these in today and from here on out will just prepare for our museum and presenting their slides to the class. We will begin presentations when we have time.

Science: We have spent this week reviewing for our EOG test tomorrow. As I told the kids today, they are ready! I am confident they will do well if they take their time, read the questions thoroughly, use their strategies and reflect on what we learned this year. Once we have the EOG's in the rearview mirror we will do a few fun year end Science activities in class. Translation, students will still need to bring their Science notebooks to class. There are good unit reviews that I posted on Moby Max if students want to look on that site tonight.

Math: We have finished up measurement and started to review for our Math EOG on Wednesday. I sent home the math packets we have worked with all year. I told students these are a good resource to review areas they feel they need a refresher on. Additionally, they can go to Moby Max and select an area that they would like a little reinforce.
